

Why Do I Need A Home Security System?

Proactive Not Reactive

A home security system should be installed as a standard appliance in a home. Unfortunately many people don't install one until they have been victimized. Returning home from a night out or a vacation and encountering an intruder in your home can be a frightening experience.

Minimize Losses

If your home is broken into your monitored alarm will summon help which will limit the time a burglar has available and the damage that can be caused and the valuables taken. Many times the alarm going off causes the criminal to flee the scene quickly without even entering.

Save Money

Insurance companies offer discounts to policy owners who install security systems. FBI studies have shown that a home equipped with a professionally monitored security system is 15 times less likely to be burglarized.

No Phone Line Needed

Cell phones have resulted in a number of homes where there is no longer a basic landline or home telephone. Technology has introduced a more secure form of monitoring through a wireless signaling device. It allows a home security system to be monitored without a home phone line.

Warning

A home security system also offers helpful warnings. If you have left a door or window open you will not be able to arm your system when you leave the house. This prevents human error from leaving your home vulnerable. Doors and windows also chime when they are opened which alerts you that someone is coming into or leaving the house.
